New Flight Information Displays @ CCIA

Just in time for the peak travel season, CCIA has installed a new display system in the terminal that gives customers the flight information they need in “real time.”

“The old system was tired and had seen better days,” said Marketing Manager Kim Bridger. This new display gives our customers the most up to date information available and does so in a modern, easy to read, digital screen. Customers will now be able to view flight and weather information on the screens, as well as important messages about safety and security. This information will also be available on the airport website.

The updated system, complete with software and digital screens, was purchased and installed for a total cost of just under $300,000.

Any News Media outlets that would like to come out and take a look at the new system should contact Kim Bridger to arrange a time.

go to a happy place.
